

Anne English

Anne English graduated from Monash University in Victoria in Arts and Law in 1980, joined the firm in 1981 and was admitted as a partner in 1986.

For many years, her field of expertise has also included maritime, mining and native title law. She has acted for both Aboriginal land owners and mining companies in extensive negotiations regarding compensation agreements. She has developed an extensive practice in general administrative law and also in the Local Government area. This experience extends to the development and implementation of by-laws, administrative procedures, permit and licensing arrangements and extensive liaison between Government Departments and clients.

Anne is a director of the Tablelands Futures Corporation and Skill360 Australia (the leading Group Trainer in Australia) demonstrating her interest in community participation in economic development, training and employment initiatives.

She is a past member of the local Maritime Advisory Committee for the Great Barrier Reef. She has developed extensive expertise in relation to the buying and selling of fishing vessels and licences both at State and Federal level and with local and international clients' administrative challenges dealing with marine related licensing and general maritime matters.
